The Pfalme of Dauid.

Receive Ô Lord ^cmy wordes with thine eares,
vnderftand my crie.
^dAttend to the voice of my prayer, my king and my God.

^eBecause I wil pray to thee: Lord in ^fthe morning
thou wilt heare my voice.

^gIn ^hthe morning I wil ftand by thee and wil fee:
becaufe thou art ⁱnot a God that wilt iniquitie.

^jNeither shal the malignant ^kdwel neere thee: neither shal the vniuft abide ^lbefore thine eies.

^mThou hateft al that worke iniquitie: thou wilt ⁿdeftroy al that fpeake lie.

^oThe bloudie and deceitful man our Lord wil ab-
horre:

^pBut I in the multitude of ^qthy mercy. I wil enter into thy houfe: I wil adore toward ^rthy holie temple in thy ^sfeare.

ANNOTATIONS

⁵ Not a God that vvilt iniquitie.) Seing God vvil not iniquitie, as thefe wordes teftifie in plaine termes, it foloweth neceffarily, that he is not author, nor caufe of anie finne. For God doth nothing contrarie to his owne wil. But he hateth iniquitie, and in respect therof hateth al that vvorke iniquities, as the authours of iniquity, though he loueth them as his creatures and of his part requireth their faluation.

God is not author nor caufe of finne.

^a No true nor folide goodnes in the wicked.

^b They thinke nothing but vanitie, and mifchiefe.

^c Yelding lothfome ftinch, bitternes, and rancor,

^d yet they flatter with feaned good wordes.

^e Albeit the iuft defire the conuerfion of the wicked, yet if they wil not repēt, then the iuft conforme their defires to Gods iuft iudgement: which shal be manifested in the end of the world.

^f The iuft shal receiue fentence of eternal glorie.
