

Chapter 10

Roboam requested by Ieroboam and the people to lighten their yoke of seruice, 6. leauing the counfel of the ancient, and folowing young counfellers, threatneth to preffe the people: 16. wherupon manie reuolt from him.

The second part.
Diuifion of the kingdom.
Dauids iffue reigning only in two tribes, which alfo are caried captiue into Babylon.

3. Reg. 12.

And Roboam went forth into Sichem: for thither al Irael was affembled, to make him king. <sup>2</sup> Which when Ieroboam the fonne of Nabat had heard, who was in Ægypt (for he was fled thither from Salomon) forthwith he returned. <sup>3</sup> And they called him, & he came with al Irael & fpake to Roboam, faying: <sup>4</sup> Thy father preffed vs with a moft hard yoke, do thou command lighter thinges then thy father, who layd vpon vs a heauie feruitude, and eafe thou a litle of the burden, that we may ferue thee. <sup>5</sup> Who fayd: After three daies returne ye to me. And when the people was gone, <sup>6</sup> he tooke counfel with the Ancientes, which ftoode before his father Salomon, whiles he yet liued, faying: What counfel geue you, that I may anfwer the people? <sup>7</sup> Who fayd to him: If thou wilt pleafe this people, and pacifie them with wordes of clemencie, they wil ferue thee at al times. <sup>8</sup> But he forfooke the counfel of the Ancientes, and began to treat with yongmen, that had beene brought vp with him, and were in his trayne. <sup>9</sup> And he fayd to them: What femeth to you? or what fhall I anfwer this people, which hath fayd to me: Eafe the yoke which thy father layd vpon vs? <sup>10</sup> But they answered as yongmen, and brought vp with him in delicateneffe, and fayd: Thus fhalt thou fpeake to the people, that fayd to thee: Thy father aggrauated our yoke, doe thou eafe it: and thus fhalt thou anfwer them: My leaft finger is thicker then the loynes of my father. <sup>11</sup> My father layd vpon you an heauie yoke, and I wil adde a greater weight: my father bette you with fcourges, but I wil beate you with fcorpions. <sup>12</sup> Ieroboam therefore came, and al the people to Roboam the third day, as he had commanded them. <sup>13</sup> And the king answered rough wordes, leauing the counfel of the Ancientes: <sup>14</sup> and he spake according to the yongmens wil: My father layd vpon you a heauie yoke, which I wil make heauier: my father bette you with scourges, but I wil beate you with scorpions. <sup>15</sup> And he condescended not to the peoples requestes: for it was the wil of God, that his word should be accomplished, which he had spoken by the hand of Ahias the Silonite to Ieroboam the sonne of Nabat. <sup>16</sup> And al the people when the king spake rough wordes, sayd thus vnto him: We haue no part in Dauid, nor inheritance in the sonne of Ifai. Returne into thy tabernacles ô Ifrael, and do thou feede thy house Dauid. And Ifrael went into their tabernacles. <sup>17</sup> But ouer the children of Ifrael, that dwelt in the cities of Iuda, Roboam reigned. <sup>18</sup> And king Roboam sent Aduram, who was ouer the tributes, and the children of Ifrael stoned him, and he died: moreouer king Roboam made haft to get vp into his chariote, and fled into Ierufalem. <sup>19</sup> And Ifrael reuolted from the house of Dauid vntil this day.